ReDefine Next 100 - seeking a Just Transition

Connected to the Next 100 Symposium, ReDefine Next 100 is a dynamic initiative uniting individuals to tackle global challenges. Crafted for interdisciplinarity, diversity, and expertise, participants aim for real project application and stakeholder interest, navigating the challenges outlined below.

The program unfolds through key stages. Before the Next 100, participants engage in skill-building workshops. During the event, they can speak and participate in panel discussions. After N100, everything is about networking, and joining ongoing discussions when possible.

Participants embark on a transformative journey by applying directly to a challenge and presenting their ideas about it in written form. Starting virtually in April, participants undergo expert-led challenge workshops and mentoring, culminating in a week-long meeting in Berlin that concludes with the Next 100 Symposium. Here, they discuss solutions and receive further mentorship and support. Post-symposium, the project work continues with additional online mentoring and workshops.

Must focus on one of the following challenges:

1. Climate Change/Green Energy Transition: Ensure a 'Just Transition' in navigating energy solutions for a sustainable future that safeguards our planet and society. Address socio-economic disparities and champion equal opportunities to leave no one behind, ensuring a 'just transition.'
2. Digital Transition: Pioneering a 'Just Transition' in the Digital Era: In the ever-evolving digital landscape, explore groundbreaking solutions to bridge the digital divide. From harnessing the power of emerging technologies to ensuring universal digital access, embark on a 'just transition' that promotes fairness, inclusivity, and equal opportunities for all.
3. Unleashing Neuroscience as an Interdisciplinary Tool: Dive into the intersection of neuroscience and critical global themes, including society, globalization, conflicts, inequality, and the economy. Explore new horizons in technology, healthcare, and human behaviour. Redefine possibilities and join us in integrating neuroscience into the global landscape of innovation.

4. (De)Globalisation, Supply Chains, Transportation: In a world grappling with the complexities of (de)globalization, chart a course that navigates these shifts effectively. Balance regional autonomy with global collaboration, aim to find sustainable pathways.
5. Trust Deficit - Reinforcing Governance: Explore the multifaceted decline of trust in public institutions globally, driven by transparency issues, misinformation, and socio-economic disparities. Governance strategies to rebuilding public confidence.
6. Biodiversity: There's an urgent need to not only protect our planet's biodiversity & contribute to conservation efforts but to repair and regenerate. Sustainability is not enough. Seek innovative solutions that heal & safeguard our planet's rich ecosystems.

What is a "just transition"?

A "just transition" refers to the deliberate and equitable shift towards sustainable energy and digital solutions, ensuring that no individual or community is left behind in the process. It emphasizes socio-economic equality and development across all segments of society and regions, aiming to address disparities and promote inclusive growth. This approach prioritizes the needs of workers, communities, and vulnerable populations, ensuring that they are not adversely affected by the transition to green energy and digital technologies. By fostering equal opportunities and considering the well-being of all stakeholders, it seeks to create a more sustainable and fair future for everyone
